In the second reading and gospel today, we have a theology of incarnation which presents the holiness of God entering the creation and then being contagious, spreading out to all nations, out to the very ends of the earth. We tend to think of the earth as just there, raw earth, and then there are distinct special holy places and holy people. But to those who believe in Jesus as the Son of God who comes from the Father and upon whom the Spirit remains, such limited notions of holiness are now inadequate.

Jesus challenges us to have a whole new way of looking at the world: holiness is now contagious, and everywhere can be a sacred place and everyone can be a saint. We have encountered the Christ, and this challenges us to transform all our relationships. Everyone who is in Christ is a holy person and can spread holiness, everywhere can be a place where we can encounter the presence of God.

We must respect each other and the environment as a gift from God and react appropriately to its God-given nature. We cannot see it as just something that we can selfishly hijack as if it were just there. We tend to live in dualist universes: there is the sacred and the secular; the spiritual and the material; the holy and the unholy; the pure and the impure; the saints and the sinners. The love and holiness of God that became part of the creation in Jesus overcame all these dualisms and division. Holiness is contagious, goodness is diffusive, and care for the planet, care for the poor and oppressed, and care for self cannot be separated.

John the Baptist had the task of bearing witness to the incarnate Son among humanity; we have the task of bearing witness to its implications for how we treat the environment.

Clondalkin Localise Christmas Event

Clondalkin Localise Community Group meet in the Parish Centre weekly during term time. Here, young people aged 11-17 volunteer their time and talents to their local community. The September to December term saw Clondalkin Localise do some incredible work for others. The group created care packages and cards for staff and residents in St Brid's Ward in Peamount Hospital. The group also worked incredibly hard to make decorations for the ward. They sewed 50 meters of Christmas bunting and made 400 origami Santas and star decorations. They then went to St. Brid's and decorated it in advance of their Christmas party where they sang Christmas songs to entertain residents and families. One of the members, Brandon, was on news2day speaking about their work too!

This term, Clondalkin Localise have many more ideas up their sleeve and will be volunteering to contribute to their local community once again. To find out more about Localise, go to www.localise.ie.

Oh!! Look at the stream of light up along the church isle, being carefully folded and preserved for next usage.

Look at our Sun washing across our Limestone carved church front at around 12.00 noon. The shadows are magical.

Our neighbourhood blackbird eyes up the persimmon tree, unbelievably laden with fruit in mid Winter. Vitamin C to beat the band. Walking from Watery Lane to Dunnes, some shrubs are in full bloom and gorgeous.

Just be minutely attentive and all is yours.

God Bless,

Eddie
